Some applications require the extracted files to be renamed. This application doesn't rename the files. Description: The UnZip Split tool is a simple application that allows you to unzip and split zip files. Its main purpose is to extract files from a zip file and place them in the specified directory. It can also split zip files into smaller zip files. This is done using an "UnZip Split" action in the workflow. The extracted files can be grouped into different folders using a "Group Files" action. You may choose to group the files by time, date, name or type. You can also group the files by a single name using a different name. A single file can also be extracted from the zip file, which can then be renamed or not. When a zip file is split, the files are extracted and put into a target directory. Some applications require the extracted files to be grouped into separate zip files. The application will detect this and will automatically extract files from the original zip file to separate zip files. This application doesn't rename the files. Please read the help file for more information. Requirements: The program can be run on computers running Windows, Linux or Mac OS X.
